

Text of Defense Department Statement on Slaying of OSS Major

Here are the fantastic details of the alleged cold-blooded cloak-and-dagger slaying of a wartime Office of Strategic Services major in Italy as revealed yesterday in the Defense Department's "memorandum on the Holohan case" which was handed to reporters at a news conference.

"In the latter part of 1944 the whole northern industrial region of Italy, with most of the war factories, was still in Axis hands. Italian partisans, however, were actually in control of many of the rural areas north of the battle lines. A National Committee of Liberation supposedly directed the partisans, but in practice the partisan bands represented many different political colors, the largest of which was the Communist."

"The National Committee continually pressed the American command to drop arms behind the German lines to enable partisans to attack Nazi communications and transport. The big question, however, was whether the Communists would use the arms against the Germans or stock pile the equipment for a possible civil war later on. The boss of the Communist partisans was called Capt. Ciro. His real name was Vincenzo Moscatelli."

"On September 26, 1944, Maj. William V. Holohan was dropped on Mount Mottarone, about 100 miles north of the battle line. Maj. Holohan, an OSS officer, became the highest ranking American officer operating behind the German lines in Italy. He was accompanied on the drop by Lt. Aldo Icardi, age 23, and a first-generation American from Pittsburgh, where he had been a law student before entering the service."

"Icardi was fluent in Italian and could speak even the idiom of the region in which he landed. He was known for his daring and had, in fact, been picked to command this particular assignment which was secretly known as the Chrysler Mission. Because of the importance of the operation, however, Maj. Gen. William Donovan, then chief of the OSS, personally decided that an older and more experienced officer should be in command."

"Maj. Holohan was 40. He was a graduate of Manhattan College and the Harvard Law School and had served as an attorney for the Securities and Exchange Commission. He was a reserve officer and had never married. He was also a very big man and was known for his strength and general calmness of temperament."

"The other principal in the mission was Sgt. Carl G. LoDolce of Rochester, N. Y. LoDolce also was an Italian-American and spoke Italian fluently. Maj. Holohan did not. A fourth member of the dropped party was Tullio Lussi who went under the resistance name of Capt. Landi."

"The parachute party took in a radio sending set along with arms and about $100,000 in gold, American currency, and Swiss francs. The chief purpose of the mission was to get the low-down on the partisan units and to make sure that help was going to the groups that would best fight the Germans."

"Holohan kept in communication with his headquarters by radio but only asked for one drop of arms and explosives between the time he landed and the time of his reported disappearance on December 6, 1944. It was Lt. Icardi who sent the December radio message announcing the major's disappearance."

"Later, in January or February of 1945, a courier arrived at OSS headquarters in Siena with a fuller story. The Chrysler team then occupied the Villa Castelnovo, a 22-room mansion on Lake Orta, a 22-room mansion on Lake Orta. According to this tale, partisan friends had informed Holohan that the German-Fascist forces were preparing a mop-up in that area and apparently had gotten wind of the Chrysler mission. The partisans recommended that Holohan move his headquarters."

"Holohan demurred at first but chose a new location just in case. It was finally decided to move across the lake that night but before the party could take off a volley of shots, apparently from enemy sources, were heard. All of the men went in different directions with the understanding that they would regroup at the new hideout. All of them arrived safely at the new hideout except Holohan, who was never seen again. They presumed that he had been killed or captured."

"Lieutenant Icardi then took charge of the mission and it became extremely active. Between December and April, Icardi called for 50 air drops of arms. This became known as Operation PINEAPPLE. After the war, Italian Police, searching for buried Communist arsenals, dug up quite a bit of this material."

"LoDolce Evacuated. During the winter of 1945, Sgt. LoDolce had a nervous breakdown and Icardi had him evacuated to neutral Switzerland. After the war, LoDolce received the Distinguished Service Cross on the recommendation of Icardi."

"After the war the OSS and the Army conducted another investigation into the disappearance of Holohan. They investigated the possibility that Holohan might have been killed and thrown into Lake Orta, or that he might have been wounded and fallen in."

"With that in mind they even had the end of the lake near the

MAJ. WILLIAM V. HOLOHAN.

SERG. CARL G. LODOLCE.

LT. ALDO ICARDI.

BROTHER OF SLAIN MAJOR—Joseph Holohan of New York, brother of Maj. William V. Holohan, looks at pictures of two men whom the Defense Department has accused of slaying Maj. Holohan during an OSS mission in Italy in 1944.

—AP Wirephoto.

villa dragged for his body. Nothing was found. They particularly interrogated two Italian partisans who were attached to the Chrysler Mission. They were named Giuseppe Mannini and Gualtiero Tozzini. They were able to shed no additional light on the case."

"Meanwhile, Icardi and LoDolce returned to the United States and were separated from the armed forces. Icardi at first went back to the University of Pittsburgh Law School on a GI scholarship, then later went to Peru to continue his studies. LoDolce returned to Rochester where he went to work in an industrial plant."

"In July 1946, the Army criminal investigators renewed the investigation of Holohan's disappearance. This investigation disclosed that Lt. Icardi had apparently embezzled and converted to his own use a considerable large sum of money in gold currency entrusted to him by Major Holohan."

"Questioned at Length. In August of 1947 Icardi was located in the United States and was questioned at great length about the disappearance of Major Holohan without developing any new evidence. On September 19, 1947 LoDolce was also found and questioned, with negative results."

"In 1948 the Army criminal investigators made an effort to run down some very vague leads. Nothing came of this but they did obtain the co-operation of the Italian police in the Lake Orta region in establishing listening posts and informant nets, with a view of picking up all possible information relative to Holohan's disappearance. This method finally produced some leads which led back to Mannini and Tozzini. In June 1950, when a new interrogation trapped them into a series of contradictions, they finally broke down and told the real story of what had happened to Major Holohan."

"Their confessions revealed that the Chrysler Mission had brought about a bitter quarrel between the Communist and non-Communist partisans. Holohan called off further air drops of equipment until he could size up the situation. This precipitated the murder of the Major for it brought about a fatal division between Holohan and Icardi. The latter took the position that the Communists were the strongest underground fighting force and that therefore the Mission should play ball with them. The Major, however, remained dubious about the intentions of the Communist group. "In organizing the plot against Holohan, Icardi is accused of having played upon the fears of the others in the party. LoDolce, in his confession, said he was persuaded that if they continued to refuse arms and money to the partisans that the partisans in turn would either kill them or betray them to the German-Fascist forces. Holohan's stand completely frustrated his aims. Tozzini and Mannini revealed that the shooting on the night of December 6, 1944, had been faked in order to cover up the planned murder of Holohan that night. "Icardi organized the death plot which first called for the poisoning of Holohan. At dinner on the night of December 6, Mannini confessed, he put potassium cyanide into the Major's soup. Holohan quickly became ill and went upstairs to lie down. Fearing the poison would not now be effective and that Holohan would discover the plot, Icardi decided that he would have to be shot. The conspirators drew cards and LoDolce drew the two of spades. Tozzini handed him a Beretta automatic."

"LoDolce then proceeded upstairs, followed by the others, who were afraid he might lose his nerve. Holohan was groaning in pain but raised up in bed when the others entered the room. LoDolce then pressed the Beretta against his head and fired twice."

"Holohan's body was tied up in a sleeping bag and carried to the lake front. Heavy stones were attached to the sleeping bag, the body was then loaded into a boat, rowed about 100 yards and dropped at a point where the water was more than 30 feet."

"Arranged Fake Attack. Upon returning to shore, Icardi took charge, arranged the fake attack on the villa and instructed the party very carefully in the stories they were to tell and to report to headquarters. After that, the Chrysler Mission openly cooperated with the Communist partisans. Icardi was able to receive his own headquarters in Siena by reporting that the drops were being given to other groups."

"The confessions of Tozzini and Mannini were fully corroborated. The body was recovered exactly where they said it would be found. Holohan's body was well preserved because of the coldness of the lake. His wrist watch was still on his arm. Even the death gun was later found. Tests demonstrated it undoubtedly was the gun used in the killing."

"When all these facts were finally uncovered a new investigation was begun in the United States. Icardi had left the country but LoDolce was found in Rochester. When questioned anew by military police criminal investigators, he at first persisted in denials. Under further interrogation, however, he finally confessed and wrote out a statement which confirmed the story told by Tozzini and Mannini."

"LoDolce was then living at 10 Taft street, Rochester, N. Y. After his confession LoDolce was taken into voluntary custody but later had to be released when it became clear that he could not be prosecuted either in the civil courts or through a military trial."

"Recent Court Ruling. Mannini and Tozzini were first put in a military prison at Turin because they had been in the armed services at the time of the murder. Defense lawyers, however, argued that they were in fact civilians and the case dragged on for about a year while the Court of Appeals decided the question of this jurisdiction. Recently the court ruled that they would have to face trial before an ordinary civil criminal court."

"Settlement of the jurisdictional question in regard to Tozzini and Mannini has raised the possibility of the Italian courts also prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce for the same crime."

"In recent months the military police criminal investigators, the Judge Advocate's Office, Counsel for the Department of Defense, and the Department of Justice, have been reconvening both civil and military law in the hope of finding a way of prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce in this country. All possibilities have now been exhausted and it appears that the only hope of prosecution lies with action by the Italian courts."

try but LoDolce was found in Rochester. When questioned anew by military police criminal investigators, he at first persisted in denials. Under further interrogation, however, he finally confessed and wrote out a statement which confirmed the story told by Tozzini and Mannini."

"LoDolce was then living at 10 Taft street, Rochester, N. Y. After his confession LoDolce was taken into voluntary custody but later had to be released when it became clear that he could not be prosecuted either in the civil courts or through a military trial."

"Recent Court Ruling. Mannini and Tozzini were first put in a military prison at Turin because they had been in the armed services at the time of the murder. Defense lawyers, however, argued that they were in fact civilians and the case dragged on for about a year while the Court of Appeals decided the question of this jurisdiction. Recently the court ruled that they would have to face trial before an ordinary civil criminal court."

"Settlement of the jurisdictional question in regard to Tozzini and Mannini has raised the possibility of the Italian courts also prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce for the same crime."

"In recent months the military police criminal investigators, the Judge Advocate's Office, Counsel for the Department of Defense, and the Department of Justice, have been reconvening both civil and military law in the hope of finding a way of prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce in this country. All possibilities have now been exhausted and it appears that the only hope of prosecution lies with action by the Italian courts."

try but LoDolce was found in Rochester. When questioned anew by military police criminal investigators, he at first persisted in denials. Under further interrogation, however, he finally confessed and wrote out a statement which confirmed the story told by Tozzini and Mannini."

"LoDolce was then living at 10 Taft street, Rochester, N. Y. After his confession LoDolce was taken into voluntary custody but later had to be released when it became clear that he could not be prosecuted either in the civil courts or through a military trial."

"Recent Court Ruling. Mannini and Tozzini were first put in a military prison at Turin because they had been in the armed services at the time of the murder. Defense lawyers, however, argued that they were in fact civilians and the case dragged on for about a year while the Court of Appeals decided the question of this jurisdiction. Recently the court ruled that they would have to face trial before an ordinary civil criminal court."

"Settlement of the jurisdictional question in regard to Tozzini and Mannini has raised the possibility of the Italian courts also prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce for the same crime."

"In recent months the military police criminal investigators, the Judge Advocate's Office, Counsel for the Department of Defense, and the Department of Justice, have been reconvening both civil and military law in the hope of finding a way of prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce in this country. All possibilities have now been exhausted and it appears that the only hope of prosecution lies with action by the Italian courts."

try but LoDolce was found in Rochester. When questioned anew by military police criminal investigators, he at first persisted in denials. Under further interrogation, however, he finally confessed and wrote out a statement which confirmed the story told by Tozzini and Mannini."

"LoDolce was then living at 10 Taft street, Rochester, N. Y. After his confession LoDolce was taken into voluntary custody but later had to be released when it became clear that he could not be prosecuted either in the civil courts or through a military trial."

"Recent Court Ruling. Mannini and Tozzini were first put in a military prison at Turin because they had been in the armed services at the time of the murder. Defense lawyers, however, argued that they were in fact civilians and the case dragged on for about a year while the Court of Appeals decided the question of this jurisdiction. Recently the court ruled that they would have to face trial before an ordinary civil criminal court."

"Settlement of the jurisdictional question in regard to Tozzini and Mannini has raised the possibility of the Italian courts also prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce for the same crime."

"In recent months the military police criminal investigators, the Judge Advocate's Office, Counsel for the Department of Defense, and the Department of Justice, have been reconvening both civil and military law in the hope of finding a way of prosecuting Icardi and LoDolce in this country. All possibilities have now been exhausted and it appears that the only hope of prosecution lies with action by the Italian courts."

try but LoDolce was found in Rochester. When questioned anew by military police criminal investigators, he at first persisted in denials. Under further interrogation, however, he finally confessed and wrote out a statement which confirmed the story told by Tozzini and Mannini."

"LoDolce was then living at 10 Taft street, Rochester, N. Y. After his confession LoDolce was taken into voluntary custody but later had to be released when it became clear that he could not be prosecuted either in the civil courts or through a military trial."

"Recent Court Ruling. Mannini and Tozzini were first put in a military prison at Turin because they had been in the armed services at the time of the murder. Defense lawyers, however, argued that they were in fact civilians and the case dragged on for about a year while the Court of Appeals decided the question of this jurisdiction. Recently the court ruled that they would have to face trial before an ordinary civil criminal court."

U. N. Committee Hits Arbitrary Jailing of Newsmen Like Oatis

By the Associated Press
GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 16.—The United Nations Economic and Social Council's Social Committee condemned today the arbitrary imprisonment of newsmen such as Associated Press Correspondent William N. Oatis in Czechoslovakia. It urged the revocation of such jail sentences.

Only the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and Poland voted against the move, which carried by a vote of 13 to 3 with China and Pakistan absent.

American delegate, Walter Kotschnig, made it clear in introducing the resolution that it was inspired by the arrest and imprisonment of Oatis on charges of "spying" although the correspondent is not mentioned by name.

Assaults Personal Restraints. The resolution says the council "views with extreme concern all governmental action aimed at the systematic expulsion of bona fide correspondents, the imposition of arbitrary personal restraints and the infliction of punishments upon such correspondents solely because of their attempts faithfully to perform their duties in gathering and transmitting news."

It "urges strongly that personal restraints be removed and sentences imposing arbitrary punishments be revoked."

The committee also voted 10-7 and one absent not to convene an international conference to draft and sign a convention on freedom of information as recommended by the General Assembly.

The committee took the view that the climate for such a conference was unfavorable because of "the existence of a wide divergence of views concerning the restrictions and limitations which may legitimately be imposed upon freedom of information renders impossible for the time being the conclusion of a generally acceptable convention."

Curb on Czech Flights Is Considered by U. S.
By the Associated Press
The State Department has under study a plan to bar Communist Czechoslovakia's airlines from flying over the United States zone in Germany.

Officials said last night this is one of several moves being considered as retaliatory steps to the Czechs' imprisonment of Associated Press Correspondent William N. Oatis.

Exploratory talks are under way with Britain and France, it was learned, to see whether they, too, would be interested in banning Czech flights over their occupation zones in Germany.

No definite decisions have been made on these moves, officials emphasized, adding that other possible counter-action cannot be disclosed now.

Mr. Oatis was sentenced to 10 years on "espionage" charges. The United States has called his trial a farce and said he acted only as a news reporter for a free press. The United States demanded his release, but the Reds refused.

The House has passed a resolution calling for a break in trade with Czechoslovakia until Mr.

of information as recommended by the General Assembly. The committee took the view that the climate for such a conference was unfavorable because of "the existence of a wide divergence of views concerning the restrictions and limitations which may legitimately be imposed upon freedom of information renders impossible for the time being the conclusion of a generally acceptable convention."

Curb on Czech Flights Is Considered by U. S.
By the Associated Press
The State Department has under study a plan to bar Communist Czechoslovakia's airlines from flying over the United States zone in Germany.

Officials said last night this is one of several moves being considered as retaliatory steps to the Czechs' imprisonment of Associated Press Correspondent William N. Oatis.

Exploratory talks are under way with Britain and France, it was learned, to see whether they, too, would be interested in banning Czech flights over their occupation zones in Germany.

No definite decisions have been made on these moves, officials emphasized, adding that other possible counter-action cannot be disclosed now.

Mr. Oatis was sentenced to 10 years on "espionage" charges. The United States has called his trial a farce and said he acted only as a news reporter for a free press. The United States demanded his release, but the Reds refused.

The House has passed a resolution calling for a break in trade with Czechoslovakia until Mr.

Black Market
(Continued From First Page.)
official duties, and of the laws of Turkey.

The petition, filed by United States Attorney George Humrickhouse and his assistant, Richard E. Lewis, asks the Fairfax Circuit Court to attach Robertsons' bank account in the First and Merchants National Bank of Richmond, Pentagon Branch. It also requests an attachment on a house at 1635 Poplar drive, Falls Church, which the Government claims is owned by Robertson although it is deeded to James R. and Lillian E. Brownfield, who live there.

Mrs. Brownfield said Mrs. Robertson is expected to arrive in New York Monday from Ankara, after which she will go to the Brownfield home.

The Government says it has reason to believe that Robertson, through his wife, Janice, is about to dispose of the property "with intent to hinder, delay or defraud the Government of its claim."

Mr. Lewis said the case was handed to him by the Justice Department and he does not know whether Robertson formerly lived in Fairfax County. He said he assumes Robertson is still in Turkey, but could not say whether military authorities have charged him.

Mr. Humrickhouse was in Florida and could not be reached for comment.

STARTS 9 A.M. FRIDAY! MODE'S F STREET STORE ONLY!

Closing Out 829 Summer Suits

at prices that will bring hundreds of men to The Mode in double-quick time

Renowned Labels:
Fashion Park
Richard Prince
Artik-Aire
Varsity-Town
and best known Summer Brands

This is one of the most exciting suit sales you've ever seen at The Mode. We took an inventory of our summer suit stock. It added up to 829 suits—the finest summer apparel in the land. Every suit is crisp, smart and correct, but we'd rather sacrifice them than carry them over. For you it means some of the most attractive values of this or any other season. You'll find a partial listing below. You'll find many more suits in the sale when you get here tomorrow. The Mode seldom tells you to hurry in for a sale, but in this case, we sincerely urge you to be here as early as you can Friday morning for best selections. We'll have extra salesmen and fitters to serve you.

Take Your Pick Friday! Extra Salesmen and Fitters!

No C.O.D.'s, Approvals Or Exchanges. We will Charge and Alter Soon As Possible

- | | |
|--|----------------------|
| 41 Nationally known summer suits, were 20.75 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 10.95 |
| 57 Nationally known summer suits, were 29.95 and 34.95 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 19.95 |
| 89 Nationally known nylon-rayon cord suits, were 27.50 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 19.95 |
| 9 Nationally known solid shade Celanese suits, were 29.95 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 16.95 |
| 19 Nationally known rayon hairline suits, were 32.50 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 18.95 |
| 49 Finest tailored nylon-rayon cord suits, were 40.00 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 29.95 |
| 111 Exclusive Artik-Aire Suits, best sellers at 42.50 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 31.95 |
| 168 Exclusive Richard Prince Tropical Worsteds Suits, were $50 and $60 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 39.95 |
| 26 Exclusive Varsity-Town Tropical Worsteds Suits, were $65 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 47.95 |
| 47 Exclusive Fashion Park Tropical Worsteds Suits, were $75 and $80 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 59.95 |
| 53 Exclusive Fashion Park Tropical Worsteds Suits, were $85 and $90 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 69.95 |
| 24 Exclusive Fashion Park Tropical Worsteds Suits, were $95 and $100 | CLOSEOUT PRICE 79.95 |

ALL SIZES
Regulars, 35 to 50
Shorts, 35 to 44
Longs, 36 to 50
Extra longs, 38 to 44
Stouts & Portlies, 39 to 48
Short stouts, 38 to 46

THE Mode

F STREET AT ELEVENTH—Hours: 9:00 to 6:00
3331 CONNECTICUT AVE.—Hours: 10:00 to 9:00

ALSO Priced for Immediate CLOSEOUT: Furnishings, Beachwear, Sportswear, Hats

COURTESY PARKING: Downtown—Star Parking Plaza, 10th & E; Uptown—Rear of Store

New Burke Airport Hearing Being Studied in Virginia

A subcommittee of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council tomorrow will discuss the possibility of holding another public hearing on the controversial Burke (Va.) airport.

State Senator J. D. Hagood of Clover, said today his subcommittee on the Burke airport will decide at its meeting tomorrow in Richmond whether another hearing is necessary.

He would not say where the proposal for a second hearing originated.

The Legislative Council held a public hearing on Civil Aeronautics Administration plans to locate a second National Airport near the town of Burke two weeks ago.

Plans for the new airport have been approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission but are strongly opposed by a committee of Burke residents, about 100 of whom will have to move out of their homes if and when the airport is built.

C. F. Walter Funk, Frederick Farmer
By the Associated Press
FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 16.—C. F. Walter Funk, a retired farmer, died in Frederick Memorial Hospital Tuesday from injuries received when he was hit by a car on a Frederick street last Friday.

Mr. Funk lived at Park Mills, in the south corner of Frederick County. A sister is the only survivor.

Frederick city police said Norman Sier of nearby Ijamsville was driving the car which hit Mr. Funk. They said no charges have been filed against Mr. Sier, pending further investigation.

Annapolis Council Accepts Fire Marshal's Resignation

By the Associated Press
ANNAPOLIS, Aug. 16.—The City Council has accepted the resignation of Fire Marshal Robert G. Beall, who said he did not like the way the Fire Department was run.

Mr. Beall, who also works for the Naval Academy, said he did not have sufficient time for both jobs. He also declared the firemen should be paid higher salaries and that men recommended by him for firemen posts should not be rejected by the council.

Deputy Fire Chief Rush Lacey was appointed acting marshal when Mr. Beall's resignation becomes effective September 1.

SHOWER and TUB ENCLOSURES

Custom Made by MILES

Economical • Practical • Luxurious
Distinctively styled enclosures in Plain, Figured or Sand Carved Glass, framed in never-rust aluminum and rubber sealed to prevent leakage will add new and lasting beauty to your bathroom, protect walls and woodwork and save hours of cleaning time. Sizes and styles custom fitted to any tub or shower. We will be pleased to estimate... without obligation.

Washington's Most Complete Glass Service
Modern Mirrors, Antique Mirrors, Glass Furniture Tops, Glass Fireplace Facings, Shower Tub Enclosures, Mirrors, Glass and Plastics for every exterior and interior decoration.

WALTER MILES, President

When you think of Glass Call MILES
LI. 6-1234
Office: 1334 4th St. N.E.
Plant & Warehouse: Rear of 635 4th St. N.E.

JUNK METALS

WANTED

BRASS AUTO BATTERIES CAST IRON CARDBOARD NEWSPAPERS COPPER RAGS LEAD

WE WILL MEET COMPETITIVE PRICES

GEORGETOWN JUNK CO.

Rear of 3254 M St. N.W. Adams 9211-9212
To give our help a longer week end we are closing at 2 p.m. Saturdays during July and August.

The Venetian Blind that is "in" both beauty and quality
Fluxidum
Plastic finish, spring tempered aluminum

The Custom Shade Shop

426 N. Washington Blvd. Arlington Va. Phone 1401
1401 Madison Avenue, Va. Phone 1401

Call GLebe 1200 for free estimates